

KEA Calls Strike End Tuesday; County Follows Suit Wednesday

LOUISVILLE, Ky. — The Kentucky Education Association's policy-making body voted almost unanimously Monday night to end the statewide work stoppage by teachers demanding higher salaries.

Only a few dissenting votes were cast as the recommendation to end the strike was presented to the KEA's Delegate Assembly. Most teachers returned to work Tuesday, and by Wednesday all schools in the state were reported open.

Despite the decision to halt the strike, the delegates exhibited a determination to continue their fight "to improve educational conditions in Kentucky."

"The war has just begun," Joe Roach, a Louisville member of KEA's board of directors, declared at the assembly.

And amid loud cheering, the delegates overwhelmingly voted to notify State Superintendent of Public Instruction Wendell Butler that "We deplore his stand on the teacher work stoppage." Butler had opposed the strike.

The delegate assembly held over until April a resolution calling on the KEA to set up a new athletic association under its direct control. Some teachers were inclined to blame the Kentucky High School Athletic Association for the failure of the strike to carry a greater momentum than it did.

The athletic association, a voluntary organization which supervises state athletics, decided last week to hold all basketball tournaments as scheduled in spite of the strike. The KEA had recommended that all athletic contests be canceled during the walkout.

The resolution also recommended that teachers decline to sign any contracts for next year until the legislature passes bills to give them an additional $900 salary raise during the 1970-72 biennium.

Action on this, too, was held over until April.

The strike, which began Monday, Feb. 23, and at one time had an estimated 25,000 of the state's 32,000 teachers off the job and two-thirds of the state's schools closed began to fizzle late last week when court injunctions were obtained by a number of school boards ordering their teachers back to work.

The KEA claimed it still had 9,400 teachers out on strike Monday, but according to Wendell Butler, state Superintendent of Public Instruction, at least 40 other school boards were prepared Monday to seek injunctions if their teachers did not return to work.

Under this sort of pressure, many teacher associations in the state voted to return to work voluntarily.

Not A Surrender

Following Monday's vote to end the walk-out, KEA President Dr. Kenneth Estes told the assembly, "This is by no means a surrender."

Estes said the next step would be for teachers to apply pressure both to the public and to the legislature to win higher salaries and such fringe benefits as the right to negotiate with local school boards, and removal of the ceiling on property taxes — all of which KEA had hoped to accomplish by the walkout.

KEA also reports that an investigative team from the National Education Association will be in Kentucky this week to conduct a preliminary investigation that could lead to sanctions against the state's schools. Presumably this would mean the labeling of Kentucky as an "undesirable place to teach" and encouraging teachers around the country to turn down offers here. Sanctions also have the long-range effect of discouraging business and industry to locate in the state.

The KEA began thinking of a strike after Gov. Louie B. Nunn failed to allocate money for teacher pay raises in his executive budget.

The Democratic-controlled legislature by revising Nunn's budget subsequently granted teachers $200 increases the first year of the biennium and $100 the second—a total of $500 for each teacher over the next two years.

However, the KEA demanded $600 raises over the two-year period. And on Feb. 18, the 687-member delegate assembly met and passed a resolution urging each local teacher association in the state to go on strike. Each member of the delegate assembly represents 50 KEA members.

During the strike, only one measure sponsored by the KEA made any headway in the legislature. That was the teachers' professional negotiations bill which was reported out of committee in the Senate.

Other KEA-sponsored legislation, including a measure that would add a 4-cent tax to every pack of cigarettes sold in the state, are still in committee.

School superintendents from across Kentucky will gather in Frankfort Friday to discuss how and when to make up school days lost during the statewide teachers strike.

BLUE DEVILS AND EZEL TO TANGLE IN DIST. TOURNAMENT

The Morgan County High Blue Devils will meet Ezel at 7:30 p.m. tonight (Thursday) in the first game of the 61st District Basketball Tournament at Morehead.

The Devils, idled last week because of the teacher work stoppage boast an 18-5 record. Three other games scheduled for last week have been canceled.

The canceled games were to have been a make-up game with Johnson Central, and bouts with Fleming County and Garrett.

For tournament action this week, the Blue Devils will have the services of work-horse guard Doug Jones, who has been sidelined for nearly a month and a half with an injured leg.

Following Thursday's tournament opener, Rowan County will play University of Kentucky at 7 p.m. Friday, and Menafie County will take on the winner of the Morgan County-Ezel game at 8:30.

Finals will be played Saturday at 7:30 p.m. Coach Gene Cain's Morgan County charges are rated second in the 16th Region behind Ashland High School and Jones' return to the lineup boosts hopes that the Devils will get a crack at Ashland in the regional.

The Devils have beaten all district contenders in scheduled play earlier this year.

Morgan County Schools Reopen On Wednesday

Morgan County teachers returned to work Wednesday morning, nine days after walking off their jobs in support of a KEA-sponsored work stoppage.

The statewide strike calling for higher teacher salaries and passage of other KEA-sponsored legislation in the Legislature ended officially on Monday night when the KEA Delegate Assembly approved a recommendation urging teachers to "return to their classrooms as soon as possible."

The strike in Morgan affected all school children in the county—approximately 2,675—and all of the county's 110 classroom teachers and other school personnel.

The Morgan County Teachers Association had voted Feb. 11 to support KEA's legislative programs and recommendations. Sixty members were present at that meeting and the vote to support KEA was 57-2. The teachers association has 126 members.

On Feb. 17, the KEA Delegate Assembly approved a recommendation by the KEA Board of Directors that all KEA-affiliated teacher associations not return to classes the following Monday.

And Morgan County teachers, in accordance with their previous vote, stayed home Monday, Feb. 23.

Teachers met at the Kennedy Library at various times during the walkout to discuss the situation and to reaffirm their support of the KEA. But by last weekend it was obvious that a number of court injunctions ordering teachers back to work in some of the state's larger school districts had torpedoed the strike's momentum.

The local school board had adopted a hands-off attitude, but in meetings last Friday and again Sunday, many local teachers expressed a desire to return to work, though no vote was taken at either of the meetings.

On Sunday afternoon, local teachers heard a report from Miss Betty Rowland of Prestonsburg, a KEA representative, and were addressed by School Supt. Walton Jones, who expressed sympathy with their cause but urged the teachers to return to their classes as quickly as possible.

All county schools remained closed Monday and Tuesday and another teachers meeting was set Tuesday to hear reports from local delegates who attended the KEA Delegate Assembly meeting Monday night in Louisville.

At Tuesday's meeting, attended by about 75 percent of the teacher association's members, it was voted unanimously to return to work Wednesday.

The vote came after a report from Olen Gamble, one of three delegates who attended the KEA assembly meeting in Louisville Monday night. Other delegates at the assembly meeting were Cecil Shepersen and Jimmy Jones. School days missed during the walkout will have to be made up and school superintendents from across Kentucky will gather in Frankfort Friday to determine how and when to make up the days lost.

NEARBY COUNTIES

The school situation returned to normal Tuesday in Paintsville City Schools, whether as a result of a restraining order against the walkout or no one bothered to question.

In Magoffin County, teachers returned to work Tuesday on the strength of a narrow local vote. They met at 2 p.m. Monday and voted 52-51 to go back to work. Elliott County teachers had voted earlier to favor a continued state strike, but said they would obey the will of the KEA majority. Schools reopened in Elliott County Wednesday.

NORTHEAST KY. AREA PRODUCERS SELL FIRST SHIPMENT OF RABBITS

The Northeast Kentucky Area Rabbit Producers Association has sold their first crop of Commercial Rabbits. The Dutch and New Zealand white rabbits are heading for Research Laboratories in Illinois. The rabbits are offspring from approximately 400 working does, owned by local farmers throughout this area.

The participant owned co-op was initiated last fall under the auspices of Northeast Kentucky Area Development Council, Inc. Several farmers and interested persons requested information and assistance regarding rabbit production. A market was secured and a co-op formed with a loan from the Anti-Poverty Agency's incentive fund. The co-op is relatively new and still growing.

The market for the rabbits is: "Isaacs Research Animals" of Litchfield, Illinois. They have contracted to buy all offspring from 500 does at a price of $2 each. The rabbits are gathered from Carter, Elliott, Morgan, Rowan, Lewis, and Greenup counties and picked up in Olive Hill on a regular basis. Co-op members may also purchase feed, cages, medicine, etc. from the co-op at reduced prices. The money received from the sale of the young rabbits is returned to the producer through the co-op.

The first crop of young rabbits is somewhat smaller than expected. Northeast Council staff members attribute this to a severe winter and inexperience of the growers. The next crop however, should make up for the smaller first production.

NEW CITY DUMP IS CONSTRUCTED

Using workers on the East Kentucky Concentrated Employment program, the city of West Liberty last week completed work of constructing a new city dump just north of the old dump on the divide between Long Branch and Elkfork.

The same access road off KY-172 at the top of the Long Branch hill leads to the new dump, but it is 800 feet further north. This required the building of a new roadway 800 feet long to the new dump. The road has been graded.

Police Judge Ora (Jeff) Williams supervised the work. The workers cleared about three acres for the new dump which is on a 25-acre tract purchased by the city several years ago.

The mayor and city council ask that persons using the new dump to please help take care of it and not dump trash except in the allotted space.

Proposed $20,210,000 Budget Is Reduced To Only $1,144,000

Cave Run Dam is slated for completion in December 1973 and the reservoir—to be Kentucky's fourth largest—is scheduled to be open for public use by Memorial Day 1974.

However, The Courier learned this week that construction of recreational facilities and access roads necessary for full public utilization of the lake may be delayed indefinitely due to massive cutbacks in projected federal expenditures.

Original planning called for completion over an eight-year period of a number of recreational facilities—marinas, boat docks, hotel accommodations, restaurants, camping sites and picnic areas, etc.—and access roads.

Work on some of these projects was begun last year and recreational development originally was scheduled for completion in 1976 at a projected cost over the next seven years of $20,210,000.

But according to budget figures released this week by the U. S. Forest Service, funds allotted for development purposes over the seven-year period total only $1,144,000.

This means that unless additional funds are released in Washington practically all recreational development on Cave Run will be delayed and the lake will remain largely inaccessible to tourists.

Under an inter-agency agreement between the Department of the Army and the U. S. Department of Agriculture, the Army Corps of Engineers is responsible for construction of the reservoir and the Agriculture Department, through the U. S. Forest Service, is responsible for development of recreational facilities and access roads, since the lake will be largely within the Daniel Boone National Forest.

Whether the cut in the proposed budget for recreational development originated with the Department of Agriculture or whether it was dictated by the U. S. Budget Bureau was not learned.

To head out and to protect the outbacks, the Gateway Development Council is sending a delegation of county officials and interested citizens to Washington this week-end.

Gateway Development Council embraces the four counties bordering Cave Run—Rowan, Morgan, Bath, and Menfies. And development of Cave Run plays a large part in Gateway's long-range plans for over-all development of the area.

The Forest Service's long-range plans for recreational development call for major facilities in Bath and Rowan Counties with some minor facilities to be located further upstream.

The three largest recreation centers are to be located at Caney Creek in Bath County at the dam site, at Scot Creek in Rowan County on KY-801 about a mile above the dam, and at Zilpo in Bath County near the Menfies County line five miles south of the dam. When completed, these three sites are to have motel and/or hotel accommodations, restaurants, and other facilities, large marinas and beaches.

Work at the Scott and Zilpo sites is well advanced. However additional construction at one of the sites which was ready for bidding this week has been delayed due to the cutbacks and all work that has not already been contracted will have to be delayed.

The Corps of Engineers let contract for construction of the Cave Run dam last Sept. and Col. Jack T. Rhett of the Corps' Louisville District has given his assurance that the dam will be complete by 1973.

More than $6 million dollars for construction of the reservoir was included in this year's federal budget.

Recreational facilities such as hotels, restaurants, boat docks, etc. would be operated by private enterprise on a lease or rental basis under the Forest Service's plan.

INSURANCE FIRM GIVES STOCKHOLDERS FIVE CENT DIVIDEND

FRANKFORT, Ky. — A cash dividend of 5 cents a share has been declared by the board of directors of Heritage Life Insurance Company. It will be payable April 25 to stockholders of record April 1.

This is the first cash dividend declared by the nine-year-old company based at Frankfort. Stock dividends were paid in 1965 and 1967.

Harry Lee Waterfield, president, said the board approved the cash outlay in view of excellent growth experienced in 1969. The year's net gain from operation was $333,453, up 17 per cent. Earned surplus reached $344,570, up 113 per cent. Insurance in force climbed to $265.5 million, up 18 per cent.

While a net gain has been registered for seven consecutive years, Waterfield added, cash dividends were deferred until it was felt the company could sustain them in future years.

First steamboat on the Ohio River was the "New Orleans" in 1811. The boat had weight of 300 tons and was only a crude predecessor of the floating palaces that were to come later. In less than 20 years, 300 steamboats plied the Ohio. And in 1852, the height of the steamboat era, steamboats arrivals at Cincinnati were recorded at 8,000, or about one an hour.

UK AG. ECONOMIST SAYS 1/2-ACRE BASES HURT TOBACCO PROGRAM

By ERNEST L. CLARK
Courier-Journal Farm Editor

LEXINGTON, Ky. — Will the 10 per cent reduction in burley tobacco acreage this year really do the job of bringing supply in line with demand?

No, say leaders of the industry. They add that as long as farmers keep increasing yields per acre and cigarette companies keep reducing the amount of leaf in cigarettes, the problem will grow.

The U. S. Department of Agriculture took official notice of the problem last month in its notification of the 10 per cent reduction in allotments by saying the department "is prepared to work with producers and the entire burley industry to improve the program so it will be kept sound and can continue to work under changing conditions in the years ahead."

Also believing it is time for government and farm leaders to start considering the fate of the industry on which so many Kentuckians depend is Dr. Garrett L. Bradford, a 34-year-old University of Kentucky agricultural economist.

Bradford, a native of Cincinnati, who received his doctorate from North Carolina State University, says now is the time to begin thinking about altering the 30-year-old supply-management program because of three big problems facing growers.

In a paper presented recently to the Agriculture Policy Institute at Raleigh, Bradford said the shortage of labor, small allotments and the declining market for tobacco are the three major problems facing growers.

The higher wages farmers have to pay plus the acute shortage of labor are increasing the desire of farmers to mechanize their tobacco crops, which require the most labor, he said.

But mechanization runs "head on" into the second major problem — small allotments. There are nearly 195,000 allotments of flue-cured tobacco, chiefly in the Carolinas, Georgia and Florida, averaging about three acres each, and there are 285,000 burley allotments in Kentucky, Indiana and six other nearby states averaging only nine-tenths of an acre.

That, Bradford thinks, might be alleviated somewhat if burley growers, like those in flue-cured, could sell or lease their allotments.

Bradford said he believes also that burley growers might be removed from their present dilemma if lease and sale of allotments were permitted and in two or three years eliminate the half-acre minimum allotment which, according to law, cannot be reduced.

Bradford said he also believes that the pressure to mechanize the burley crop may eventually lead to farmers' acceptance of a pounds limit on the amount of leaf they can sell, similar to the program adopted in 1965 by growers of flue-cured leaf.

Burley growers have twice rejected a similar program for their leaf.

The supply problem is further aggravated, Bradford said, by a reduction in cigarette consumption in recent years as well as the smaller amount of leaf needed in the manufacture of cigarettes. Flue-cured and burley tobacco make up the major part of cigarettes.

Bradford said farmers and government leaders should be giving serious consideration to some alternative programs, such as one similar to the current feed-grains program — paying farmers to voluntarily divert their allotted acres to some soil-conserving use.

Such a program in 1969 would have cost the government $2 million to divert 20 per cent of the burley and flue-cured crops.

Another alternative, that has been suggested is one under which the government would purchase and retire allotments. He estimates it would have cost $420 million to buy up 20 per cent of the 1969 allotments, assuming burley allotments could be purchased for $3,000 an acre and flue-cured allotments for $120 a pound.

Bradford said criticisms of that program includes one that only owners of the allotments would benefit while tenants would get nothing, and in addition lose their most valuable crop.

That, Bradford said, would be true, adding that additional businesses in small towns that supply tobacco farmers also would be damaged from a lack of sales.

Bradford's paper warns farmers that they have in the past been fortunate in having programs molded to their needs. But now with smoking considered a major health problem and increasingly socially unacceptable, producer dependence on tobacco for a livelihood is becoming more risky.

1ST SGT. CARL BOLIN BACK TO VIETNAM ON 2ND TOUR OF DUTY

Sgt. Bolin

1st Sgt. Carl Bolin of Crockett, who was decorated for bravery in Vietnam in 1967, returned to Vietnam in January for his second tour of duty in the Vietnam conflict. He is a son of Mr. and Mrs. Eddie Bolin of Crockett and is a member of the 2nd battalion of the 4th Infantry Division, U.S. Army.

Sgt. Bolin was serving with the 16th Infantry Division as a light weapons advisor when he was awarded the bronze star and decorated for bravery in 1967.

The action took place March 26 as Bolin was accompanying the lead element of a force being lifted into an operational area to assist a unit under attack from a larger Viet Cong force.

The helicopter in front of Bolin's was shot down in a rice paddy and burst into flames, also igniting cans of irritating fumes aboard the plane. Sgt. Bolin and the senior advisor immediately and without regard for personal safety, made their way across the paddy and rescued the crewman of the downed plane and helped him back to a place of safety. But the senior advisor lost his life in the rescue. Then Sgt. Bolin, despite difficulty of breathing and still under fire from the Viet Cong, directed air strikes against the enemy, enabling the Allied forces to win the engagement.

"Sgt. Bolin's rescue of the downed helicopter and his outstanding and indomitable spirit and personal bravery contributed to the defeat of the Viet Cong," says his citation for bravery.

BILL UPPING INTEREST ON LOANS PASSED BY HOUSE; GOES TO NUNN

FRANKFORT, Ky. — The House Monday passed a Senate bill to raise the interest ceiling on loans under $7,500 to 9 percent and to remove the interest ceiling on larger loans.

Present law sets the legal maximum interest at 7 percent for any loan, regardless of amount.

Four proposed amendments which would have eased the interest requirements called for in the bill somewhat were defeated.

The bill now goes to Gov. Louie Nunn on a final roll-call vote of 42-24.

Proponents of the unamended version of the bill maintained that the present 7 percent maximum interest rate makes it all but impossible to get a loan since the present market rate of interest exceeds 8 percent. This in turn means no money is available for home building, proponents argued.

But Rep. James Bruce, D-Hopkinsville, declared the bill without amendments would be

TOM DUNCAN'S—

FRANKFORT WATCHLINE

FRANKFORT, Feb. 23 — Inflation is reaching legislative trading.

Trading votes on bills is standard procedure, the routine way to build support for a measure important to you in exchange for going along on others that don't matter to you.

And with time running out, the sharp traders gain more and more leverage.

Added to the picture this session is the strength of the committees. One vote on the floor seldom proves crucial. But one vote in a committee often is vital in bringing a bill to the floor in the first place.

And the haggling over committee votes is getting brutal. Even Gov. Louie Nunn's forces are feeling the crunch.

For most of the session the governor has been able to sit back comfortably, with little threatening legislation even introduced and few bills of his own needing help.

But he ran into trouble with his package on the area development districts and the Kentucky Program Development Office, a key control point in the flow of massive federal anti-poverty money.

The two bills were introduced six weeks ago. But they drew fire from State School Supt. Wendell Butler.

And the House Committee on State Government includes some of his most knowledgeable fellow Democrats—fully aware of the "due bill" value inherent in their control of the measure.

An aide to the governor, acknowledging the efforts to move the bills, said: "We haven't looked at the consequences if they shouldn't pass. It could be a two-edged sword."

Trading is so widespread that we checked carefully when records were changed without authority to conceal that a committee had voted to kill two bills. The best explanation from one on the inside was:

"It was just stupidity — just plain stupidity."

Serious efforts to end Daylight Saving Time in Kentucky apparently are over for this session. Standard-time backers seemed in full control at the start but were out-manuevered. The Sunday-closing muddle continues to set new heights of confusion. The session could end with the situation more messed up than ever, if that's possible.

Antagonism between teachers and a number of lawmakers built steadily during a week of mass lobbying.

And the Democrats' plan for a study commission touched off the first real partisan oratory on the strike.

The feeling here grew that every part of the Kentucky Education Association legislative package was in jeopardy.

Some top Democrats are renting a private home in Frankfort for the session—and were victims of thieves.

The loot included a case of whiskey. But the embarrassing part was that it was Scotch, not Kentucky bourbon.

When the House was debating whether to hear Ohio Governor James Rhodes' idea on sharing ownership of the Ohio River, a number of representatives protested against giving up control.

Speaker Julian Carroll claimed the chamber by saying: "The motion isn't to give the gentleman on river—it's just to hear his case before we turn him down."

SCHOOLS OPEN.

(Continued from page one) tion, but no teachers showed up at Elliottsville School. All Rowan County schools were in session Tuesday, however. Floyd County teachers met Tuesday morning and voted overwhelmingly to go back to school. Classes reopened Wednesday.

At Mt. Sterling, the Montgomery County Board of Education withdrew a suit seeking an injunction against its striking teachers after the teachers voted unanimously Tuesday to return to their classrooms. Schools in Montgomery resumed operation Wednesday.

Wolfe County teachers returned to their classes Tuesday after voting unanimously Monday to go back to work. At that meeting a spokesman for the board of education assured teachers that no action would be taken against any of them if they returned to classes. All Wolfe County schools were open Tuesday morning.

Early Teacher Retirement Plan Approved In House

FRANKFORT, Ky. — An early retirement plan for teachers was approved this week by the House but it was made effective in 1972 so that the $2.2 million $2.4 million annual cost could be put off until then. Under the bill, which now goes to the Senate, teachers could retire after 30 years service regardless of age. Teachers who retire after 30 years now are penalized 5 percent for each year they are under age 60.

The Future Farmers of America organization is sponsored nationally by the Agricultural Education Branch in the Office of Education, U. S. Department of Health, Education, and Welfare. FFA is an educational program, conducted in the public schools.

OBSERVATIONS AND PREDICTIONS

P. M. GENERAL TO KY. — President Nixon's Postmaster General Winton M. Blount will be the featured speaker at this year's membership banquet of the Kentucky Chamber of Commerce in Louisville April 1. Blount was a successful general contractor in Montgomery, Ala. when he was named by Nixon.

BOURBON FOR MOON — John Ed Pierce, the Courier-Journal's editorial writer assigned to mountain subjects, has forsaken moonshine for bourbon. Pierce is author of a new book, "Nothing Better in the Market" which is a history of the Brown family of Kentucky that made the Brown-Forman Distillers famous liquor.

DOWSING FOR OIL IN BREATHITT — More oil and gas wells have been drilled in Breathitt than any other county in Eastern Kentucky in recent years. And the exploration in Breathitt may have been set off by one Henry Gross, a water witch from Maine who was brought into Breathitt in 1958-59-61 and 62 by Leslie Egbert of New Jersey to dows for oil and gas on the Press Howard tract which Egbert owned, also on other tracts in Breathitt in which Egbert had an interest. Of the first nine wells drilled at sites picked by Gross with his dowsing rod seven were producers. And pay dirt was hit at approximately the depth Gross said would be paid dirt. The Breathitt county dowsing by Gross is described in a 1968 book by Berthold E. Swartz, M. D., a psychiatrist and Fellow of the American Psychiatric Association, which book has been loaned to us by a local resident. And its all interesting reading. Dr. Swartz attempts a scientific explanation of Gross's water well witching by exploring his emotional and neurological traits. But he never takes into consideration the theory that since everything in the earth is polarized negative and the air is polarized positive that the law of polarity, like attracts unlike, may explain why water witching is possible. However we had never heard of a water witch dowsing successfully for oil. But then Gross is an unusual dowsing, as evidenced by his record and the fact three books have been written about him, two of them by the well known author Kenneth Roberts.

STATEMENT BY THE MORGAN COUNTY EDUCATION ASSOCIATION

Classes resumed in schools throughout Morgan County Wednesday morning, and the Morgan County Education Association, which is composed of classroom teachers and administrators and is a member of the K.E.A., feels that education in the State of Kentucky has made a very definite step of progress the past few days, from the attention pointed toward the need of every student in this state to be educated equally to that of other states.

It seems apparent that every one, be it teacher or parent, is determined to keep education foremost in his minds and actions.

Teachers and administrators all over the state and here in Morgan County have resolved to put forth every effort available to improve the standards of education, and in order to do this are staying with their demands which are still before the legislature. The teaching profession itself needs upgrading in order for our students to be reached effectively.

Support from the general public is what has "turned the tide" in the improved education direction. Support from Morgan County's citizens is extremely gratifying and had it not been for the understanding manner of our Superintendent and Board of Education during this emphatical stand, the accomplishments that have been made and that are forthcoming would never have come to pass.

The Morgan County Education Association needs you and you need its capabilities. This united effort will bring forth the results for which every Kentucky citizen strives.

AFTER THE WALKOUT—

A MORGAN CO. TEACHER COMMENTS

It is very doubtful if any of us realize the effect our words have on other people, especially children. None of us would know how to measure the effect our words have on another person. A large degree of the effect would depend on the influence we have with the person or persons hearing our words. You have some effect, good or bad, on every person of normal intelligence that hears you speak.

Within the last few days I had a very good demonstration of this used on me, although neither of the two different people knew I was talking to the other person. I talked with one person who was just bubbling over with the feeling of spring. This person said the day was so pretty and warm the picture she was painting with her words was so alive with the feeling of spring that I could have closed my eyes and I'm sure I would have seen Dogwood and Redbud trees covered with blossom. I would have smelled the Lilac and heard the Robin and Bluebird.

Within less than ten minutes I was talking with another who was speaking of the weather at the same place of being so cold and gloomy I was unable to shake the bad colds that had plagued him lately. His word pictures of the weather were so gloomy and cold I almost asked him to excuse me until I could get my coat, hat and gloves.

Two word pictures of the weather at the same place within a ten minute period. Yes, words are powerful.

As everyone in Kentucky knows, we teachers have demonstrated in the only way we knew how, to focus attention on issues we think are important. No one can say we were successful or unsuccessful. Only time can

Educational Establishment Losing More of Its Glow

By LIVINGSTON TAYLOR
Courier-Journal Staff Writer
FRANKFORT, Ky. — An air of disenchantment with the education establishment continued to pervade the state Senate chamber yesterday.

Even while hundreds of their educator-constituents looked on the Senate passed, 30 to 5, a bill to relax requirements in one of the carefully guarded areas of organized education—teacher certification.

House Bill 365, which now goes to Gov. Louie B. Nunn for almost-certain approval, would allow certification of private-school teachers who hold a bachelor's degree from any accredited college or university.

This would mean private-school teachers would no longer have to have the education courses and student teaching now required.

However, they would still be required of public-school teachers.

In support of the bill, Sen. Gibson Downing, D-Lexington, declared:

"If Albert Einstein were living today, he would not be qualified to teach mathematics in a high school in Kentucky because of their teacher certification requirements."

Similarly, said Downing, the late Gen. Dwight Eisenhower probably could not have taught military science at Kentucky Military Institute, nor could former Gov. (now Federal Judge) Bert Combs "in the subject that he may know best—political science."

"To say that the certification system we have now qualifies a person per se to be a good teacher is somewhat ridiculous," said Democratic Floor Leader Walter Huddleston, D-Elizabethtown.

"There are many highly qualified people that might be available to teach on a part-time basis—whose teaching could be of extreme value to the young people—but because of certification requirements are denied this opportunity."

"Sometimes I feel like the whole certification process is merely designed by the universities of the state to keep their rolls filled with those who are interested in the teaching profession—and with the increased rolls comes increased appropriations."

Must Guard Against Incapable
The bill was opposed by Sen. Fred Bishop, R-Manchester, a school administrator and official of the Kentucky Education Association.

While agreeing that there are qualified persons without certification, Bishop said, "we must also guard against those who are incapable. The certification process is the only assurance we have."

However, Sen. Clyde Middleton, R-Kenton County, responded, "The reason we have teacher certification requirements for public schools is because the law requires students to go to public schools."

"A private school stands or falls on whether they do the job in a manner suitable to the parents. If they don't, they'll go out of business. We don't need to protect the private-school parent or student."

Sen. Romano Mazzoli, D-Louisville, said the bill arises from "extraordinary pressure" being applied by the state Department of Education to private schools to insure that their teachers meet present certification requirements.

There are many private-school teachers who don't have all these particular education courses, "yet are producing good college material" in their students, said Mazzoli.

Louisvillian Draws Applause
Mazzoli raised the possibility that if the bill is not enacted private schools would lack the state department's accreditation although they would still be accredited by national associations.

In that event, Mazzoli said, their graduates could be accepted "at Columbia or Harvard or Michigan, but not at Morehead or Eastern or Western."

During the debate, the bill's most vigorous opponent was Sen. Henry Beach, D-Louisville. Beach drew applause from the galleries by declaring:

"I am somewhat surprised that we would come today to lessen the requirements of teachers when they are sitting here by the hundreds waiting to upgrade their program."

But the unpredictable Beach wound up voting for the bill with the explanation: "If this is the desire of the people in the private schools that they want this thing—I think it's a step backward—I'm going to be willing to give it to them. I vote 'aye.'"

On the roll-call vote, the bill was opposed by Sens. Bishop, Edwin Freeman, D-Harrodsburg; Tom Garrett, D-Paducah; Wilson Palmer, D-Cynthiana; and Ray White, R-Bowling Green.

The bill is part of Nunn's "educational reform" package and thus is virtually assured of his signature. It previously passed the House, 78 to 6.

The authority to certify teachers is vested in the state Board of Education. The course requirements for teacher trainees are prescribed by the Council on Public Higher Education and approved by the state board.

Certification is administered by a division within the state Department of Education. The division's director, Dr. Sidney S. Simandle, opposed HB 365 at an earlier Senate Education Committee hearing.

Simandle said liberal-arts graduates lacking education courses now may receive special certificates but must enroll in the education courses in the summer. He said about 300 enter teaching under this plan each year.

'We're Getting The Job Done'
"The courses would increase the chances of an individual's competence to teach," said Simandle.

However, a supporter of the bill, Walter Anderson, a teacher at the private Sayre School in Lexington, said 42 per cent of Sayre's teachers do not meet state certification standards, but "ninety-five percent of our students go on to college."

"We think we can offer the proof in the pudding that we're getting the job done," Anderson said.

Yesterday's Senate debate on certification followed a speech Thursday by Sen. William Gentry, D-Bardonia, criticizing the Kentucky Education Association and the state Department of Education for allegedly failing to provide good leadership to teachers.

BREATHITT WET-DRY VOTE SET

JACKSON, Ky. — Breathitt County Judge Nim Hanson set a tentative date of April 20 for a local option election on the sale of alcoholic beverages after a hearing Monday.

The county's Dry League charged that a petition calling for the election contained several illegal signatures. After examining the petition, Judge Hanson disqualified 151 signatures, which he said belong to minors, deceased persons or out-of-state residents.

Judge Hanson ruled, however, that the remaining 1,250 signatures were valid and were enough under state law to call for the special election.

If approved, the election could change the county's status from dry to wet.

As part of their course of study, vocational agriculture students are required to have farming programs, or to gain agricultural work experience, under the guidance of a teacher.

FIRST CHRISTIAN CHURCH

By Mrs. W. H. Wells

On the great clock of time there is but one word — NOW. Today the best thing you have in this world is today. Today is your Saviour; it is often crucified between two thieves, yesterday and tomorrow. Today you can be happy, not yesterday or borrowed from tomorrow. There is no happiness except today's. Most of our misery is left over from yesterday or borrowed from tomorrow. Keep today clean.

Wake up your mind to enjoy your food, your work, your play today. Today is yours. God has given it to you. All your yesterday He has taken back. All your tomorrow are still in His hands. Today is yours. Take its pleasure and be glad. Take its pains and play the man. Today is yours, use it so that as its close you can say: I have lived and loved today.

For the first time in several months I was able to attend the morning worship. Regardless of weakness of body and the passing of many years it was a service enjoyed and to be remembered. If you missed it I'm sorry. Rev. John Pemberton and his family brought a large gathering of people to hear Rev. Pemberton bring a most needed message from 2nd Corinthians 6:2—"Behold, now is the accepted time; behold, now is the day of salvation. Rev. Pemberton's lovely wife, Majorie, entertained the Bible School assembly with sons, playing her own accompaniment on the guitar. The entire service was most inspiring.

Each week we have from the church what is called a "member's Memo". Every member receives one. All activities of the church are listed, and there is no excuse for saying, "I didn't know anything about that." Mrs. Wells doesn't write any more for The Courier. You read your "Members Memo" and you won't miss anything that happens in the church. What I write is for anyone regardless of what church he or she attends and with the large mailing list of The Licking Valley Courier, there will be found many subscribers who are away from West Liberty and Kentucky who at one time lived in Morgan County and attended the First Christian Church. They want to know all about our new leadership. Come some Sunday and worship with us and I'm sure you will be glad you came. The doors of First Christian are always open to any who feel that...

"Now is the accepted time behold this in the Day of Salvation."

P.S. Try to attend the Prayer Service March 5th for an hour of Bible Study on "The Growth of The Church," conducted by Rev. Bliffin at 7:00 p.m.

WHO AM I? WHERE AM I? WHERE AM I GOING?

By Snowden Johnston

I was visiting with a good friend and neighbor of mine, Goebel Ratliff. He was sick and was worrying because he was unable to fulfill an engagement to talk to high school students. He told me his topic for his talk would have been, "Who Am I? Where Am I? Where Am I Going?" Using his topic, I tried to express my feeling for Mr. Ratliff and the feelings of many more of his neighbors and friends.

Who Am I? Where Am I? Where Am I Going?

You are Goebel, as good a neighbor as any one could possibly have.

You are Goebel, as good a bank vice president as any bank could wish for.

You are Goebel, as good a school teacher as ever entered a school house.

You are Goebel, the best husband (I'm sure Edna would say) that any woman was ever fortunate enough to have.

You are Goebel, the best brother of five fine men and four fine women.

You are Goebel, a loving daddy for Bill and a wonderful Papa for Paul.

You are Goebel, the best uncle to a large number of nieces and nephews.

You are Goebel, big enough to talk to senators and governors and little enough to listen to a little old lady trying for old age assistance.

You are Goebel, one of two people my little granddaughter wanted to visit on Beggar's Night.

You are Goebel, who always had time to laugh with us or time to sympathize and cry with us.

You are Goebel, one God chose to go out and tell some lost souls to come in and enjoy the goodness He had in store for them.

You are Goebel, one we all love.

You are Goebel, who made some footprints that many of us would like to be able to follow in.

You are Goebel, one many of us would say is our best friend.

One of your questions was, Where Am I?

You are in the hearts of hundreds of good people in Morgan and surrounding counties.

Where Are You Going?

You are your last question. Only God can definitely answer that, but if He would leave that decision to all of us who know you, our first wish would be for you to be here with us and then when He calls you away to your eternal reward, we would ask that you be given the prettiest mansion on the highest hill that He has reserved for his earthly saints.

—Snowden Johnston.

IN MEMORIAM

In loving memory of Bernard and Myrtle Perry.

As we write these few words down. There are lovely thoughts, when we had the both of you around.

It was hard to see you leave, and so very hard to give you up. But we're living in prayer each day, and still have got that trust.

Someday we'll be together as we were once before, where there will be no sadness nor tears for ever more.

There are memories of our childhood. Those bright and happy days. There are memories of your wisdom, and your understanding ways.

There are memories of your kindness of your warm and tender touch, your sweet and gentle nature. That we miss so very much.

There are memories of your laughter, and on both your faces a smile. That chased away gray clouds and made our life more worthwhile.

As we travel down these rough roads, we can look back, and see your heavy loads. The little blue truck that sat out front, always made it to Sunday School and church.

When we recall these memories everyday, they're dearer still for we loved you then, we love you now, and Mom and Dad, we always will.

CROP ALLOTMENT HISTORY CAN BE SAVED BY FARMERS

Producers with 1970 crop allotments for their farms can protect the allotment history even though they did not grow the allotment crop, according to Ben Cox Chairman of the Morgan County Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation (ASC) Committee.

He pointed out that since allotments are based on the history of the crop on the farm, producers may have a vital interest in a provision which permits them to preserve allotment history, even though they are not planning to grow the crop this year.

The allotment crop need not be produced in order to preserve allotment history. This is because each additional acre maintained in a vegetative cover that is comparable to a conservation practice carried out under the Agricultural Conservation Program will qualify as history credit. The acreage for credit must be in addition to any conserving base acreage required to be maintained on the farm.

To preserve the allotment history, a producer should follow these procedures:

1. Request preservation in writing at his County ASCS office.
2. Maintain the acreage in a vegetative cover. This cover must have been seeded after Nov. 3, 1965 (date of the Congressional Act which provides this authority for preserving allotment history). New seedlings can be made and such seedlings are eligible for cost sharing. The acreage can be grazed or harvested for hay.
3. Report to the County ASCS office that the vegetative cover has been maintained.

FIRST CHURCH OF GOD BY SNOWDEN JOHNSTON

Rev. Robert Mattox moved to West Liberty last Wednesday. He will be the Pastor for the congregation at the First Church of God on Broadway here in West Liberty.

Rev. Mattox was born and raised in West Virginia. He went to High School at East Bank, West Virginia and became a Christian at the young age of eleven years. His earthly father was one of the American heroes that gave his life in defense of our country in the Battle of the Bulge in 1944.

Rev. Mattox answered his Heavenly Father's call to become a minister at age 13. His first pastorate was in a Church in West Virginia. Then he was asked to pastor a Church in Arkansas. He has been pastor of the First Church of God at Neosho, Kentucky for about three years.

He comes to us very highly recommended. We have heard from him some wonderful messages and we believe he is a God-sent minister and we are thankful that he came our way. We have faith that with God's help, his work here in West Liberty and Morgan County will be fruitful and because of his service we believe our Church and Community will be made a better place.

Morgan Countian
In Turkey Writes

Merhaba (which in Turkish means hello, to everyone.) I would like to say a special hello to my parents, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Shaver of Route 1, West Liberty.

My husband, Robert, is from Pennsylvania but wishes to claim Morgan County as his residence, to, as he likes it very much. There aren't any other Morgan Countians here in Turkey as far as I know. Turkey is like everywhere else, everyone is rushing around trying to make a living. Observing the small wages that Turkish people makes really makes us appreciate the USA. There are only a few televisions here and they only have stations at certain times of the week, very few telephones in private homes, and only one radio station in English at certain times of the day. Most of our news is from one local paper which is printed in English for us, letters from home, and the very welcome Licking Valley Courier once a week.

This week, Turkey is observing the biggest religious holiday of the year. During February 17 through 20 they have a holiday called Feast of the Sacrifice. This holiday is as important to them as our Christmas is to us. It is in remembrance of when Abraham offered Isaac for sacrifice. Before February 17 every religious person in Turkey buys a sheep. It must be at least one year old. If any person owes money, he is not allowed to buy a sheep. On February 17, the sheep are slaughtered. A third of the meat must be given to the poor, a third must be given to friends, and the remainder is left for them to keep for their own feast.

It is very common here to see horsedrawn wagons on the streets, ladies riding donkeys, and once in awhile a lady is seen with a veil covering her face. These ladies never let their faces be seen in public. We are looking forward to a trip to Athens, Greece and possibly Rome in early fall.

ODDS AND ENDS

By Earl Kinner, Jr.

Know what misocapists are? They're folks who hate tobacco smoke and who currently are attempting to saddle cigarette smoking with the stigma of social unacceptability. Some folks hereabouts have other names for misocapists, most of them probably unprintable. According to Emmi Corwin of the National Clearinghouse for Smoking and Health, their avowed goal "is to foster the same kind of revulsion against smoking which in earlier days caused spitting to be outlawed and spittoons to disappear from fashionable parlors and the halls of Congress." Impossible? Maybe. But these folks are responsible for these latest anti-smoking commercials on television which paint cigarette smoking as a filthy habit indulged in only by uncouth bores.

According to sources usually deemed reliable, Robert Caskey caught a large sailfish in Florida recently. Others, however, say it was a large sunfish. Bob denies the whole thing.

An item in this column last week dealing with the state's system of area development districts (of which Gateway Development Council is one) has elicited several comments. Who, many want to know, was responsible for setting up the districts? Most of the districts apparently were drawn up with little regard for grouping counties with common problems and conditions into the same district. What, for example, does Morgan County have in common with Montgomery, Menifee, Bath and Rowan Counties make up the Gateway Development Council.) For that matter, what do West Liberty and Morgan County really have in common with Rowan County and Morehead? And Gateway Council planners have drawn up plans which relegate West Liberty to the status of a "satellite town" to feed business into Morehead and Mt. Sterling. Under the present system, joining counties such as Morgan, Elliott, Wolfe, and Menifee, with similar economic and cultural conditions and common problems, have been separated and relegated to second-rate status behind their larger and richer neighbors. This situation prevails in most of the state's 15 development districts.

Upcoming legislative action in Frankfort on two bills dealing with the area development districts affords legislators a chance to rectify this situation. If the measures are passed unamended, they would give the current system permanent status. Since the measures also would grant the governor—through the Kentucky Program Development Office—absolute control over the allotment of all federal money for local community projects, they are bound to generate a fight. Legislators, county and city officials, and school officials who dislike the thought of somebody having to sell their political souls in order to secure approval of federal grants for projects in their districts, are going to give these bills careful scrutiny. While they're at it they might also consider redrawing the development districts into more compatible county groupings.

We were recently informed that son Greg's pet chipmunk, Charley, should have been named Charlene.

The University of Kentucky maintains dormitories and dining facilities for 4,442 undergraduates, 253 graduate students, and 37 married students.

INFORMATION ON NEW VARIETY OF
BURLEY—KY. 14

UK Extension Service Report

This new burley variety, KY 14, described as "very useful", has been announced by the University of Kentucky Ag Experiment Station and the United States Department of Agriculture and Agricultural Research Service. It is highly resistant to four major tobacco diseases (rust, mildew, wildfire, black root rot and mosaic), is a standup variety, and has good yield and quality. KY 14 was field-tested several years at the Lexington station and the Princeton Experiment Station in Caldwell county, plus several other official and unofficial on-farm tests throughout the state. It also was included in field trials in southern Ohio and in Missouri.

It is NOT resistant to black shank. "We do not want any farmer to think KY 14 will be useful in fields where black shank has been a problem. There are other varieties that are useful as such farms," KY 14 is a standup variety, comparing favorably to Burley 21, the widely used variety in this state now. Its leaves are a bit longer, wider and more numerous than Burley 21, but the plants are about the same height, approximately 5 feet. The new variety is about seven days later maturing than Burley 21 but, "this is no handicap at all for the major burley-producing areas."

The KY 14 holds its bottom leaves well and has good handling characteristics in the field and curing barn. Industry evaluation of cured KY 14 shows its smoking and chemical makeup "entirely satisfactory," the breeders said.

In yields in Kentucky tests over the years, KY 14 averaged 300 pounds more leaf an acre than Burley 21. In other states and on Kentucky farms in official and unofficial tests, the same was true; KY 14 consistently out-yielded Burley 21. "It is hard to measure (Or be accurate about) curing properties of a variety, because of so many factors, but KY 14 has done very well in the curing category," Kentucky 14 resulted from a breeding process that involved crosses of Burley 21, KY 16, Warner variety and a breeding line known as Ex. No. 4. Growers may want to try a few rows along side the main variety being grown to see what it will do on their own particular farm before using it for the entire crop.

Feb. 24 — Several families in this community have been hit by the flu bug and have been left awfully sick.

Gary Dale Cantrell went to Fairborn, Ohio, Sunday where he has employment. He plans to work through the summer there.

Leon Williams and Dorcie Keaton were Sunday dinner guests of Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Cantrell.

Mr. and Mrs. Billy Cantrell and son, Allen, were weekend guests of Bill's father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Cantrell and family of here.

Mrs. Nettie Pelfrey has been awfully sick with flu for the past week.

We are awfully sorry to hear of Mrs. Maude Hill becoming suddenly ill one day the past week.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Wright and Lori were here from Fairborn, Ohio over the weekend visiting Mr. and Mrs. Leonard Wright and Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Cantrell.

Heartfelt sympathy is extended to the families of Mrs. Virgie Bradley and Drexel Curtis Fyffe, who passed away the past week.

A revival meeting is in progress at the Paint Valley Church by several ministers. Everyone is invited to attend.

Leslie Applegate, of Freehold, New Jersey, was elected in 1928 to serve as the first national president of the FFA. He is now a prominent farmer in his State, specializing in growing apples.
